EDITORIAL

Climate crisis: No one will be spared

Some recent news and headlines: Extreme flooding in Maharashtra and Himachal Pradesh in India, and Rhineland-Palatinate and North Rhine-Westphalia in Germany. Hundreds dead in floods in Henan (China). Heat wave in British Columbia (Canada) kills dozens. How do we make sense of all this? Climate scientists are wary of overstating risks, what is known with few errors (false positives). But there is a real danger of type 2 errors (false negatives). As climate risks rise, type 2 errors can give policymakers a false sense of comfort that things are not so bad. After all, climate models have actually underestimated the scale of impact even at relatively lower levels of warming. Warm weather that could result in Arctic permafrost thawing is happening 70 years ahead of climate model projections. This week, the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) released the report of its Working Group I (on the physical science of the climate crisis), laying many doubts to rest. Global surface temperatures are 1.09°C higher in 2011-2020 than in 1850-1900. The world will breach 1.5°C of warming within the next two decades with extreme events rapidly rising. Weather attribution studies investigate whether specific extreme weather events are more likely to be due to deviations from the normal range or whether they are made more likely (and worse) due to human-induced climate crisis. Take Verkoyansk in eastern Siberia, known as the Pole of Cold for having recorded the lowest temperature north of the Arctic Circle (-67.8°C in 1892). This year, it registered the highest temperature ever within the Arctic Circle of 38°C. Studies now conclude that the severe heat wave in Siberia in 2020 would have been near-impossible without the human-caused climate crisis. The same applies to the heat wave in north-western United States and parts of western Canada this summer. We must, first, understand that climate extremes today could well become the norm tomorrow. Climate risks are non-linear and the past is not a good predictor of the future. Heavy precipitation events that happened once in 10 years in the pre-industrial era now likely occur 1.3 times each decade (rising to 2.8 times with 4°C of warming). South Asia and several parts of Africa will also face severe droughts with 1.5-2°C of warming. Moreover, our warning does not stop at our borders. It is tempting to dismiss disasters happening elsewhere as not being of immediate concern. But we must spot the warning signs because warming anywhere will impact our future everywhere. In the last 30 years, the Arctic region has warmed at 0.81°C per decade, more than thrice as fast as the global average of 0.23°C per decade. Melting ice is now the most important cause for sea-level rise and revised estimates predict an over one metre rise in global sea levels by 2100. This is not the Arctic's problem alone, but will severely impact coastal and low-lying areas all over the world.

Housing scam hits VMC, names of 382 beneficiaries changed

Ahmedabad : They felt fortunate to be selected for getting a house when their names got picked up in the government's lucky draws. But luck ran out even before they could be allotted the houses under the Pradhan Mantri Awas Yojna (PMAY). A massive scam unearthed in the Vadodara Municipal Corporation (VMC), allegedly misappropriated by two staffers, has revealed that names of 382 beneficiaries of PMAY had been replaced by those of some other people. The duo - Pramod Vasava, an executive engineer and Nishith Pitwa, a software expert - are accused of clandestinely changing names of the beneficiaries and uploading a fraudulent list on the civic body's website. The beneficiaries were selected in a computer draw organized on August 7 as part of the completion of five years of the Vijay Rupani government. The draw was used to allot 382 housing units at the event held at Sir Sayajirao Nagar. Based on a complaint lodged by city engineer Shailesh Mistry, an offence of criminal breach of trust by public servant and forgery was lodged at Navapura police station against them and cops picked up the duo for questioning. However, investigation was handed over to the detection of crime branch (DCB) on Thursday evening, looking at the seriousness of the scam. The scam came to light when the beneficiaries, who were allotted houses in the draw done by minister Yogenesh Patel found that their names were missing from the list on the website. When Pitwa was asked by Mistry about the anomalies in the names that were selected during the event and the list of the events, he spilled the beans. Pitwa gave a written statement that he was asked by Vasava not to publish the selected beneficiaries' list if the names shared by him on mobile phone were not selected. Pitwa was asked to run the computer draw program again and prepare a new list. Pitwa said that he had told Vasava, who is in the affordable housing department, certified the new list which was later uploaded on the website.
